Alumni Re-Elect Word President Add Five Members To Board

At the annual meeting of the Auburn Alumni Association, always held on Homecoming morning in the Union Building, members of the Association heard updates on the state of the university from President James E. Martin '54 and on the Alumni Association from Alumni President Robert D. Word '55.

President Martin reported that Auburn's fall enrollment stands at an all time high of 19,363 students. Included in that number are more than 3,000 freshmen of whom 40 percent have an ACT score of 25 or better. Also among that number are 46 National Merit Scholars and both of Alabama's Presidential Scholars. Dr. Martin praised the Auburn faculty, saying "good faculty is why we draw good students."

President Martin also informed the alumni of the university's $100 million building program which will include a $10 million chemistry building to be located in Graves Center on the site currently occupied by three cabins which housed Auburn athletes during the Fifties, including President Martin when he was a member of the Auburn basketball team. President Martin also gave the latest information about the library expansion, which will practically double the size of Ralph Brown Draughon Library and should be under construction during the next calendar year. Already in the planning stage is a Small Animal Research facility to house research animals used in programs in Veterinary Medicine, Pharmacy, and Agriculture.

As the result of a bond issue approved the day before Homecoming by the Auburn Board of Trustees, Dr. Martin told the Alumni that the university will be building an athletic administration building across the street from Sewell Hall. Plans are also being made for renovation projects as well as a $6 million building for the College of Business and a $10 million Life Sciences Building. Another $21 million in student housing construction is planned and will include the replacement of Bullard and Magnolia Halls. In addition, Dr. Martin expressed hope that the hotel and continuing education center to be located on College Street will begin construction after the first of the year.

In his report, Alumni President Bob

Word also talked about building—the new Alumni Center, which also will be located on College Street. The approval of that project Mr. Word called "the highlight" of his year as alumni president. He reported that the Alumni Board had had an update from the architect of the facility, Joe Donofro, the afternoon before, as well as approved a plan for raising funds for the building. He reported that each member of the alumni staff and each of the current board members had already made a gift or a pledge to the alumni center and assured all the alumni that they would be given an opportunity to contribute to the building.

Later in the morning the assembled members re-elected Mr. Word as president of the association and elected members of the board, five of whom began three-year terms. The ten current members had their terms of service extended. The action came as the result of an amendment to the by-laws approved by the Board of Directors who met the afternoon before. Lee Griffith '62 of West Chester, Pa., chaired the committee which recommended expanding the board and extending the term of office for directors.

Speaking at the annual meeting, Mr. Griffith explained that the number of Auburn alumni had grown until it seemed appropriate to increase the board to involve more alumni and provide better participation: "A lot of good things are happening at Auburn that we want to be a part of. Auburn has a great student body and a fine faculty, but it also needs a good, supportive Alumni Association, which is involved in working for the university." Previous board members had expressed concern at the two-year term, feeling that by the time they were knowledgeable enough about the association and the university to make a real contribution, their terms were over. Therefore, Mr. Griffith's committee had recommended that the terms be extended to three years, and that action was also taken at the board meeting on Nov. 6.

The nominating committee, chaired by William Jordan '59 of Fort Payne, recommended new directors Patricia Nunn Barkuloo '56 of Tifton, Ga.; Wayne Fowler '63 of Tampa, Fla.; James W. (Bill) Lester '39 of Burlington, N.C.; Earl Parson '60 of Pensacola, Fla.; and John Sanders '43 of Kingsport, Tenn., for three year terms. Before announcing the nominees, Mr. Jordan explained the criteria used in choosing nominees include involvement with the Alumni Association and the university as well as professional and community participation and leadership.

Already serving on the board, but having a year added to their terms of office which will end in 1988 are: Joe Crane '43 of Valdosta, Ga.; Jack Dryer '43 of Satellite Beach, Fla.; H.B. Lee '61 of Birmingham; Sheldon Morgan '55 of Mobile; and Georgia Vallery '57 of Auburn. Having

Here and There—

A Place Called Pinnell

By Jerry Roden, Jr. '46

In a quiet expanse of old fields and young pines three miles south of Camp Hill, two Tallapoosa County roads cross and proceed peacefully toward their destinations with scarcely a ripple of traffic to mar the serenity of the passing days, weeks, and years. Often during the four decades I have known this spot, things have changed so little that I have enjoyed illusions that time stands still here. One of the prime sources of my pleasant fantasies is an old white frame house built in a familiar ell form with a hallway or breezeway running lengthways down its middle. This house stands on a rise just up from the northwest corner of the two-road intersection.

Outwardly the house and its front yard have remained unchanged in all the years I have known it. In the foreground, between the house and the road it faces, stands a giant water oak with twin trunks—or two huge water oaks grown together at the base, I have never been sure which—flanked to the east and west by identical elms of impressive stature. Between these trees and a wide porch, which extends virtually the full length of the front of the house, lies a sandy white yard always swept impeccably clean in the manner of all well-kept country yards of a half-century or so ago.

To illustrate that the keeper of the house has maintained some touch with the modern world, a broad well-mown lawn stretches down each side and far to the back of the dwelling. Rather than detract, this greensward serves as a frame to highlight the centerpiece: the old-style front yard and home.

Inside, the house also has suffered little change with the passing years. The occupant has introduced indoor plumbing and gas heat so discreetly that they blend almost imperceptibly with the broad hallway, the large rooms, the lofty ceilings, and the floors and the walls of solid native pine.

The other prime source of my pleasant illusions about this spot where time often seems to stand still is the mistress of the house which I have described. Mrs. Janie Lee Harris Meadows, now a sprightly eighty-seven-year-old, seems to have changed even less than her residence during the four decades which I have known her.

Miss Janie has a gift for lively conversation about past, present, and future events. She can evoke memories of people long departed in such a way that you can feel their presence with you. She can speak of the present and make it seem more compatible with the past and more wholesome than it normally appears to be. And she can look to the future without summoning up any visions of a holocaust.

Her natural cheerfulness and ability to inspire seem particularly remarkable when one realizes that Miss Janie has been well acquainted with loneliness and sorrow: For virtually all the years I have known her, she has lived alone. She was widowed at forty-one, lost her son and only child three years ago, has outlived already six of her seven brothers and sisters, one nephew, four nieces, and numerous other relatives and friends.

In addition to these natural sorrows, Miss Janie is seeing the rapid decay of nearby Camp Hill and already has seen the place where she was born, grew up and has lived virtually all her life decline from a thriving community with a school, two churches, and a store to a crossroads and a few scattered dwellings. And yet Miss Janie's ability to create the illusion of an immutable continuum remains as strong as ever.

What are the sources of her special powers? First, we would like to claim some credit for Auburn University: Miss Janie became a school teacher in her early years by passing a state examination and then attended some summer sessions for teachers at Auburn. However, we suspect that Auburn added but a touch of sweetness to her already sunny disposition. Second, a quiet and tolerant religious faith may provide some strength and durability of character. And third, cultural background—that of the South generally and of Camp Hill in particular—may account for much of her versatility as a hostess.

However, if I were pressed to suggest the primary wellspring of this lovely lady's unusual abilities, I would suggest her own innate zest for life plus the influence of a place called Pinnell—a community with the commonsense to decline when a decline was in order, a people with the grace to stay the pace of change from time to time through four decades, a place which encourages one to maintain the house of Wash Pinnell essentially as it was built more than one-hundred years ago.

Our Apologies

In the October issue, we compounded a series of Alumni Office errors by printing them in The Alumnews—to our dismay and that of the two alumni who found themselves given inappropriate spouses or jobs.

Our apologies go to Ginger Moseley Parr '68 of Tuscaloosa. No longer married to Vincent E. Parr '67, she owns Ginger's, a dress shop in the Tuscaloosa Galleria, and no doubt would enjoy seeing more Auburn people among her customers.

We also must apologize to Jacob F.B. Lowrey, III, '69 of Atlanta. It is his wife, Pedrick, a chemist, who works for Coca-Cola, and not he. Jacob, a certified public accountant, is a partner of the firm of Windham, Brannon & Co. —KL

A Leaf-Watcher Alert

By Bob Sanders '52

Leaf-watchers, tenHUT! Prime leaf-watching time is rapidly scooting by. Eyes leafward!

Earlier there were dire predictions about the leaf colors this fall, what with the dry weather and everything. Last year, I remember, started off slow. Bad year, everybody thought. Then, way over in November, a few trees started going wild, and it turned out to be a very watchable fall after all. And this year has become one of the greatest years for leaf-watchers ever.

Some trees almost reach out and splat you with their brightness. Others are more subtle about it, but just as beautiful in their own quiet ways.

October and April are the two most beautiful months, generally speaking. And fortunately, our Octobers usually last almost until Christmas.

Some of you are familiar with one of my favorite little passages, the chapter in the original Bambi translation about the last two leaves on the big oak tree at the end of the meadow. Felix Salten started something with that. Maybe it wasn't even original with him, but I know of at least a couple of variations on the theme. The guy who draws the comic strip Funky Winkerbean does an occasional episode with two leaves. The inspiration is obvious.

A friend recently sent me a copy of a Reader's Digest reprint of a story, that in many ways is almost plagiarism, and it's a story by a Nobel Prize winner, too, Isaac Bashevis Singer.

Oh, there are differences: Singer names his leaves Ole and Trufa, and he doesn't specify whether they're oak leaves or what. But just as Salten's leaves, they're the last two on the tree, and they agonize about what lies ahead—or below, in this case.

And just as Salten's, Singer's leaves console one another—"Look how wrinkled I am, how shriveled....I'm all yellow," moans Trufa.

"Who says green is pretty and yellow is not?" replies the loving Ole, just before a wind tears him from his twig.

Singer differs from Salten after that, contriving kind of a happy ending, whereas in Salten's story, the episode ends with the stark, "Winter had come."

While Singer's story is also charming, I'll stick with Salten.

But they both make you appreciate beautiful fall leaves even more. On a recent trip to Frontier Country, we were amazed at how much the leaves had changed just in the week since an earlier trip. The sourwoods and sweet gums and black gums, especially, were showing off. Maples, too, and some dogwoods.

Most of the oaks have barely started changing. A few popcorn (Japanese lantern, or is it Chinese lantern?) trees have started to catch fire. And there's more to come. The hickories will turn their brilliant yellow. And watch for the ginkgos. But be quick. A tree can be one uniform mass of freshly-minted gold coins one day and bare the next.

Sassafras, Virginia creeper, poison ivy (yes, beautiful), persimmons—so much to look at a body can hardly drive for "Lookie yonder! And yonder! Oh, and the beeches, too."

In fact, whenever I read Salten's two leaves passage about the big oak tree at the end of the meadow, I automatically picture in my mind a big beech that stood at the south end of the upper pasture, a pasture which we had laboriously carved out of the bottomland bushes, briars, and trees. But we left the big beech. It was a goal to work toward when we were mowing the weeds from the pasture, a big, white-barked tree, branded with many names, dates, hearts, etc.

One year raccoons made a home in that tree. "C'ere!" Daddy yelled one day, when we had been cutting and slashing away on the mighty weeds that would spring up every few weeks, and which would, if neglected just a tad too long, take over the whole pasture (that had been seeded, according to API Extension Service recommendations, in Dallas grass and white clover). And there, peeping out of a hole high up in the beech, were three baby 'coons, looking just like an illustration on one of those Leanin' Tree Christmas cards.

So, you can picture whatever tree you like when you think about the last two apprehensive leaves of Salten, Singer, or Winkerbean. I'll picture the big beech at the end of the upper pasture.

At the End of a Year

By Jerry F. Smith '64

The end of my first year in this job seemed an appropriate time to report to the alumni. My overall goal was to continue, and where possible to improve on, the existing programs established by Joe Sarver and Buck Bradberry. I also wanted to work on communication, internally and externally—with the staff and the faculty on campus and with the alumni and friends off campus. One way I saw to do both of those things was to reorganize the alumni and development staff, to focus on some of my goals to make the Alumni & Development Office more responsive to alumni, and to better serve the University.

Because this office is charged with the responsibilities for both the Alumni Activities and the Development Activities of Auburn University, the work here is so much more complex than most people realize.

The size of the staff limits us from doing some things we'd like to do but always we continue to emphasize the major things. Obviously we need a new building, and Buck and I had been talking about that need long before I took over this job. We didn't want to divert efforts from the Generations Fund and so we waited until it was virtually over. At the May 1985 Alumni Board meeting we talked about the need, and the board approved a feasibility study. Of course that feasibility study now has moved into a reality for which we will begin fundraising after the first of the year.

We first thought of seeking funds from a few people. Then we came up with a plan to seek the funds from the Life Members. Each member of the Alumni & Development Staff and each member of the current Board of Directors has already made a pledge. I've been told that Auburn is the only university in the SEC without an alumni building. We think such a building not only will help us do better work but will also increase our visibility and bring more alumni into our programs. With that involvement we can better serve the alumni and the university.

In addition to the general goals that I have for the Alumni & Development Office, we have specific yearly goals for our alumni programs. For at least three years we had all been so busy with the Generations Fund Drive that something had to give, and it was the Auburn Club program which suffered. So my first goal was to improve clubs. For the first time, three staff members are spending 95 percent of their time on alumni activities—and most of those are club activities. As a result, I think the club program is much better than it was during the Generations campaign. During the year we held a club leadership seminar. Our experience shows a club would be great as long as you had a great president and then if he moved or when his term was over, it practically died because there was no continuity of leadership. With an annual club leadership conference we hope that we can train officers as they move up. We had a super response to the club leadership seminar in August with 42 clubs represented. We'd like to double that number this coming year.

We also want to involve faculty more in our alumni programs. During the Generations Fund and the time of controversy in the early Eighties, the faculty leadership met with the Alumni Board and that was so successful that we wanted to repeat it at least once a year. During the past year, we invited the faculty chairman to come to the alumni board and talk about some of the activities going on there; the president of the Alumni Association recently has addressed the Faculty Senate. The bottom line is that both groups understand each other better. In addition we encouraged faculty to attend club meetings and clubs to invite faculty members. We had 34 representatives this past year from the faculty and administration at club meetings. One of our goals this next year will be to increase that number.

Another of my goals was to have a more active alumni board. We have a very good board, with members who want to be directly involved in the on-going programs. One way to increase involvement is to increase the length of service; another is to increase the size of the board. A committee from the board studied the size here and at other colleges and saw most comparable universities have larger boards. In 1960, Auburn had 34,000 alumni and six alumni board members. This fall we had 117,000 alumni and ten board members. The committee suggested that we needed to increase the size of the board to fifteen to better represent the numbers of alumni, which the board did at its Nov. 6 meeting.

We also studied the Association finances. In the past few years, we have had to use reserve money to operate programs. A committee of the board, working with the associate director in charge of alumni programs, studied our dues program and recommended that we increase dues. We did increase dues 67 percent. Alumni more than accepted the increase and we feel very good about their reaction. Auburn has always had great participation through dues when you compare us to other institutions our size. This year we had an increase in the dollars; next year we're going to look to increasing the number of people involved.

Looking ahead to 1986-87, one of our goals is to increase Annual Giving participation. We'll look at our program and see if we can increase participation—and it's needed. The president and the deans of various colleges need money given to them for projects, and they need unrestricted money that can be used where university needs are greatest. We are already setting up development committees as subcommittees of the advisory councils. We are beginning with development committees in Veterinary Medicine, Business, and Home Economics. These volunteers are charged with the increase of Annual Giving support to their area. In the past there's been no consistency to the gifts coming into a school or department. For instance, one year Dean Vaughan of the Vet School might have $40,000—the next year he might have $125,000, but he couldn't count on having that money the following year. Each development committee will be trying to increase the Annual Giving participation by alumni in its school and make it consistent.

We are also going to establish the Samford Society after the first of the year. Auburn graduates from the past four years will be invited to join. We are trying to get more participation in Annual Giving from our young grads. It's usually been ten to fifteen years after graduation before an Auburn graduate becomes an active giver. We hope with this special program we can encourage recent graduates to start early including Auburn as one of their priorities for giving.

Also in 1986-87, we're going to review the reunion program. In the past we've been holding reunions for the graduates of 25, 40, 45, 50, 55 and 60th anniversary classes. We would like to bring back more classes, and as football weekends have gotten so hectic with so many things going on, we are looking at the possibilities of having all the reunion classes back for one long weekend in late spring or early summer. We believe we can involve the alumni more with the university and the faculty using such a plan. We are thinking about a Thursday-Sunday program and we're looking at some exciting new things.

The other area of our responsibility for the university is in development. We have spent the last year continuing to wind down from the Auburn Generations Fund. Our primary goal was to look at our internal development operations, to look at the way we were receiving and receipting gifts, and to improve that area of the operation. And we've come a long way. We now have a full-time accountant. We have reorganized that area and some very positive things are happening.

A second goal has been to raise funds for the library. Our goal is to raise $5 million for the library with a short term goal of having $3 million committed by December 31, 1986. We currently have $3.1 million.

A third goal was to work with the president to determine a list of primary projects and a secondary list of projects for development. Our primary development projects, as determined by the president, were (1) the library; (2) Eminent Scholars; and (3) the Humanities. We're running on schedule with the library. We have our first Eminent Scholar, thanks to a gift by the Farm Bureau in September, and we're working on the possibilities of others whenever the state makes the funds available to receive those. However, we're disappointed that we haven't been able to do any more than we have in the humanities and we will concentrate more on that area in 1986-87.

As the Generations Fund wound down, we wanted to report back to the donors and in order to do that we've produced a newsletter which was mailed in April and October. Each issue of the newsletter lets the donors know about some of the things Auburn is doing with their money. Another of our goals regarding the Generations Fund was to produce a final document summarizing that fund drive, which we hope to get to press the first of December.

In the 1986-87 year, we will continue to work on funding for the Humanities, as well as seek another $1 million for the library and $600,000 for a second Eminent Scholar. But we also will be looking ahead to some other programs in development.

We are establishing under the direction of Dr. Julian Holmes an on-going program in deferred giving. We believe that is a program that can help Auburn tremendously in the years ahead.

We will also be setting up a system of stewardship reports, a way to systematically notify donors about how their gifts are being used.

We plan to begin to establish constituency fundraising in the various schools and colleges. For those of you who aren't familiar with our jargon, that means that a person will work for the Alumni & Development Office but his or her primary responsibilities for fundraising will be largely for a particular school and he will work closely with the dean of the school. We will be developing plans for this program in the next few months and, if Dr. Martin approves them, some constituency fundraising could begin with the fiscal year 1987.

I'm very excited about the future of the Alumni & Development Office and about Auburn University. We're very fortunate to have the kind of staff we have. They've faced a lot of challenges this year and they've met them head on. I'm proud of the staff and the reorganization. I'm proud that the building is beyond the talking stages. I'm proud of our faculty and that development efforts continue to be well-received by the alumni. Private support in 1984-85 was $12.7 million; in 1985-86 it was $14.2 million. That amount of support has to continue to increase, and, if we're doing our job, it will.

APPRECIATION—Don Machen '61 of Auburn, left, received a plaque and words of thanks from the Auburn Alumni Association at the meeting of the Board of Directors on Nov. 6. Mr. Machen served on the board for two years. Making the presentation was Alumni Association President Bob Word '55 of Scottsboro.

Play Santa to Auburn: Make a Gift to Annual Giving and Help Your Favorite Department

By Kaye Lovvorn '64

Auburn's budget woes are much in evidence across the campus these days with funding cuts and proration. A letter to department heads asking what they could do if they had $1,000 dollars given to them by a kind alumnus "Santa" resulted in a flood of mail and a variety of requests. Please read the lists, comments, and questions below and consider a gift to a particular Auburn project through Auburn Annual Giving.

We selected $1,000 because it is a significant amount, although as several department heads wrote, "any amount will help" and also because $1,000 qualifies a donor for membership in the President's Club.

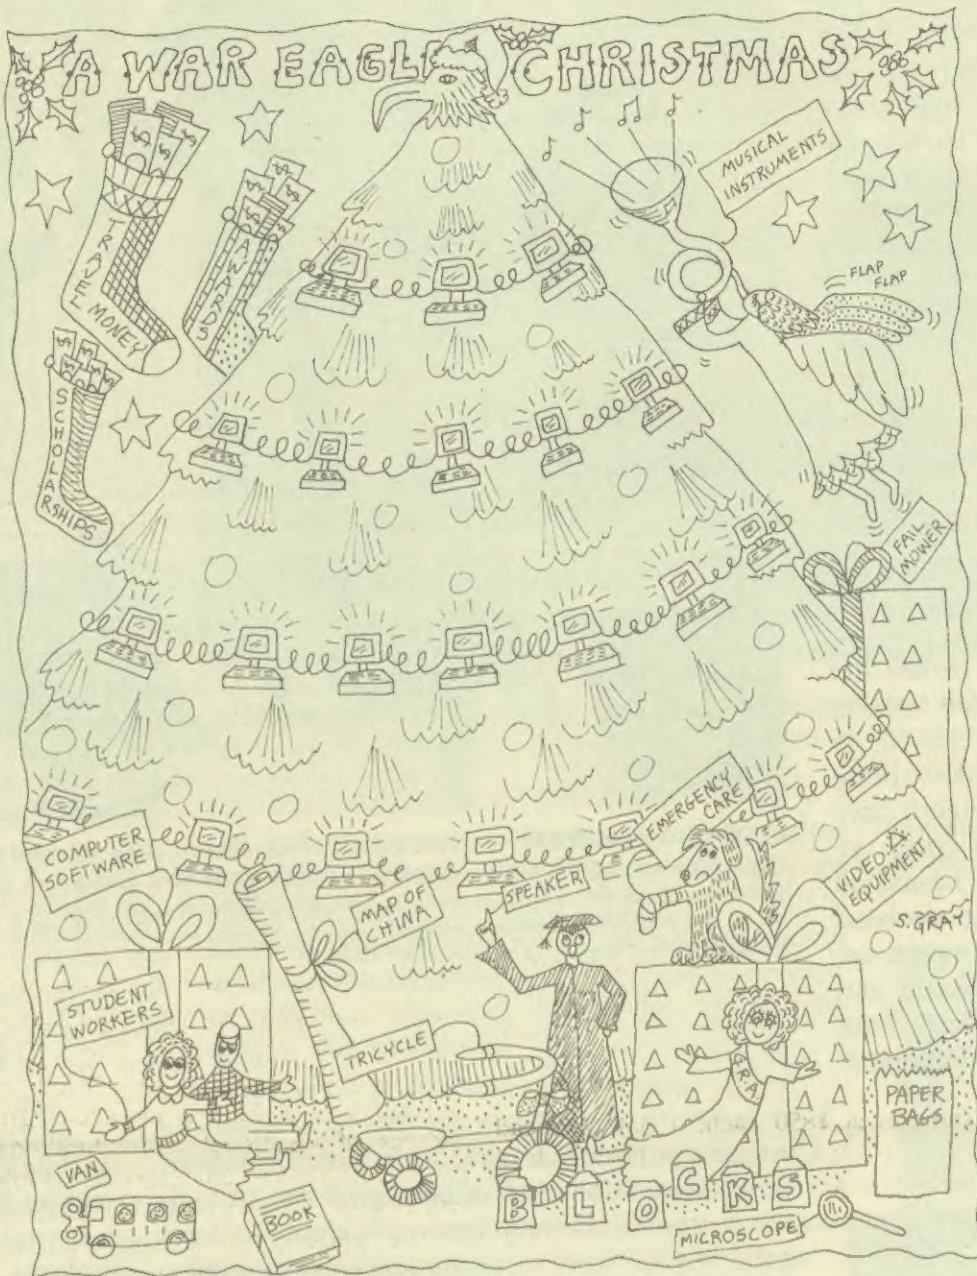

If you don't see your favorite department or school here, it doesn't mean they don't need your support. And don't forget, the Auburn Library can always use your contributions. New books are printed in every field every day, and Auburn is trying to bring its collection up to American Research Library standards.

Make your checks payable to the Auburn University Foundation—Auburn Annual Giving and designate the project you want your gift to go for. We guarantee you'll feel better, get a tax break, and contribute to an Auburn program in which you have a personal interest. Gifts should be mailed to Christmas gift, Auburn Annual Giving, Auburn University Foundation, 116 Foy Union Building, Auburn University 36849-3501.

Requests by college include:

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE Agronomy & Soils

Dr. Louie Chapman, acting head of the Department of Agronomy and Soils, has a long list of items which his department would be most happy to receive for Christmas gifts. First, five alumni of his department could become members of the President's Club and combine gifts to provide personal computers for the department office. Another President's Club gift could be used for a $1,000 field data logger to allow direct transfer of data from the field to the computer, which Dr. Chapman explains "will save time and labor and reduce chance of error." Other alumni might chose to spend their funds on a $1,200 fail mower for maintaining the turf research area. A $500 gift would buy blackout curtains for the crops teaching laboratory. Three President's Club Members could go together to provide computer equipment to use in agronomy teaching. Other alumni could provide the $1,700 seed moisture weight tester for crops teaching. A $500 gift would buy a grain bushel weight tester for crops teaching. Gifts of any amount would be welcome to the Joseph T. Hood Scholarship and Development Fund, according to Dr. Chapman. Gifts in any amount would also be welcomed to provide for department student workers. As Dr. Chapman explains, "this support helps the department, but it provides even greater help for students both as financial assistance and valuable experience."

Animal & Dairy Sciences

"Our department has many needs for further developing our undergraduate teaching program," explains Dr. David G. Topel, head of the Department of Animal and Dairy Sciences. The department needs video equipment to use in the classroom. "Certain laboratory techniques are difficult to demonstrate on live animals due to safety concerns for students. Much of this information can be demonstrated very well with the use of video tapes," explains Dr. Topel. Gifts of any amount would be combined to provide the equipment and films ($5,000).

Ag Economics & Rural Sociology

Dr. Joe Yeager '43, head of Ag Economics, says he will use any support that comes to his department through the Christmas gift list to provide funding for graduate research assistantships. "The level of support for the GRAs in this department is among the lowest in the South. With fairly heavy teaching loads for the faculty, we must depend on GRAs for a major part of our research work."

Ag Engineering

Should Santa decide to fulfill the Christmas wishes of the Department of Agricultural Engineering, Dr. Paul K. Turnquist would have as his first priority money for a fund to use for student enrichment purposes, such as funding field trips, bringing speakers, and providing seed money for special student projects. Several $1,000 gifts would go a long way toward making that Christmas dream a reality. Second on Dr. Turnquist's list is a personal computer ($1,500) for student use. He'd put an engraved plate on the computer saying, "A gift to the Agricultural Engineering Department from Mr. and Mrs. John Alumni, Class of 19XX." Third on his list would be funds to provide "mini professional improvement leaves" ($1,000 each) for faculty, which would enable them to spend a week visiting an industry or another university to keep up in their areas of specialty. He would also like a portable display stand for use in student recruitment ($1,000) and a video camera to enhance instruction ($1,500).

Fisheries

Computer-related presents also topped the list for the Department of Fisheries and Allied Aquacultures. The department, which is making an effort to answer questions pertaining to the fisheries industry across the country and around the world, would appreciate any gifts toward improving its computer capabilities to make it able to do that job better. Several gifts of $1,000 could make an impact. Computers also come second on Department Head Wayne Shell's list: Like other Auburn departments, fisheries needs personal computers for use by faculty at $1,500 each.

SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE

The Dean's Office in the School of Architecture would put any gifts it received toward a hookup for the academic advisor to have direct "computer access to the student records in the Registrar's Office as well as class rolls in the departments and other information useful in advising students," according to Dean Keith McPheeters. He estimates the hookup would cost $3,500.

Architecture

Whatever gifts his department received as a result of alumni playing Santa through Auburn Annual Giving, Prof. Wayne Drummond of the Department of Architecture would use for publications, for student scholarships, and to provide computers for faculty.

Building Science

On Prof. Paul Brandt's Christmas wish list for the Department of Building Science is travel money. "We continually need travel funds for faculty to attend professional meetings, seminars, etc.," he notes. In addition "as new construction related software becomes available for our computer class, we need to buy it to stay current." A gift of $500 would be used for software. And if several donors chose to go together, or if they got several smaller gifts designated for equipment, "we would like to purchase an electron measuring device ($3,500) for our building science surveying classes."

Industrial Design

When graduates of the Department of Industrial Design make up their gift list, Prof. Bill Bullock '65 has a number of suggestions if they're looking for that perfect gift to Auburn. For instance, $300 would buy a choke for a metal lathe, $900 would provide a color enlarger, an extra $200 in the budget could provide a letter-making machine, another $200 would buy a poloroid slide developer or a hot wire cutter for foam, an air brush compressor is in the $300 gift category, while $500 would provide photography lights or educational design videos. Two $1,000 gifts would combine to provide computer-aided design software, or four $1,000 gifts would add additional computer equipment.

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

Dean Charles Kroncke of the College of Business says his wish is for gifts to create an endowment for graduate students for earnings to be used for scholarships. Fifteen or so alumni of the College of Business could become members of the President's Club in Annual Giving and set up such an endowment at the same time.

Dr. Bill Holley, associate dean for academic affairs in the College of Business, wishes for gifts to support the Master of Business Administration program, which he directs. At the top of his list comes scholarships to recruit outstanding students as well as special funds to use in recruiting minority students. Each President's Club donor could make it a merrier Christmas in Thach Hall with funds in that area—especially if his or her company provides matching gifts. Smaller gifts would support field trips ($500 or so) and graduate student professional activities (a trip to a conference maybe for $600). Other gifts of $500 or less could be used to promote the program and its graduates by printing brochures, paying for advertisements, and printing resumes for students.

Economics

Dr. Robert Hebert of the Economics Department leads off his Christmas list with the wish for three dot-matrix printers to use with AT&T Personal computers. Each costs $400. His second wish is for a group of President's Club donors to go together and fund scholarships for deserving graduate students at $8,000 each. Next he'd like an annual award for outstanding teaching at $500. And finally, he'd like funds to send faculty members to a national or regional conference ($600 each).

Finance

Dr. William P. Lloyd, head of the Finance Department, joins most of his colleagues in longing for money to send faculty to professional meetings ($600 each). His second wish is for computer software ($500). Third is money for travel expenses and honorariums to bring speakers to campus ($1,000 each). A kind Santa could also provide travel funds to take Auburn classes to visit area businesses ($300), and finally, he'd like contributions to create scholarships for deserving students ($1,000).

Marketing

Any marketing alumnus wishing to make gifts to Auburn and play Santa to the department from which he graduated would find a number of items on Department Head Hugh Guffey's wish list. His first priority is for a personal computer software library for marketing applications including: several strategic planning packages such as Defender ($250 each), basic analysis packages such as RATS ($300 each), basic databases such as Census & Citibank at $700 each. Dr. Guffey's second priority is instructional equipment. "Our video player is obsolete and needs replacing ($650). We need four drives for our current printers ($400 each). We need a laser printer ($2,000) and a spray ink plotter ($2,000)." The third area in which alumni gifts would be welcomed is in providing a video library for classroom presentations. He particularly would like to have a selection of case histories at $100 each and copies of promotional award winners such as CLEO's at $500 each.

School of Accounting

Number one on the request list of the School of Accounting is word processing equipment for the use of the secretaries, which would cost $1,500. Second priority is for scholarships for students ($1,000 each), and Head Professor Wayne Alderman's third wish is for computer software for faculty ($750).

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

Dean Jack Blackburn of the College of Education tops his list of Christmas wishes for his area with funds to provide support for faculty. First on the list comes money for expenses for faculty to travel to present research papers ($700 each), and he'd like to provide support for at least 15 faculty members. Second on his list are teaching awards to recognize faculty for "effective teaching," (at least $500 each) as his College enters into a new program to improve the education of Alabama teachers. And third on his list are awards to faculty for outstanding research contributions (again at least $500 each).

Educational Media

Dr. Dan Wright of Educational Media has a long list of audiovisual equipment needed this Christmas for his department, leading off with 10 slide projectors with zoom lens at $350 each; 2 public address systems at $350 each; 10 tripod screens and 10 hanging screens at $250 each; 4 16mm projectors at $1,100 each; 10 cassette tape recorders at $140 each; 10 ½-inch VHS players at $1,200 each; 3 ½-inch VHS cameras at $850 each; 4 3M overhead (doublebulb) projectors at $800 each; 2 slide sorters at $250 each; 1 dissolve unit at $1,200; an appliance truck at $350; and 3 video tripods at $350 each.

Counselor Education

Dr. Mark Meadows of the Department of Counselor Education led off his Christmas wish list for the department with a request for computer software for the testing laboratory and for other test inventory material ($1,000). Second on his list is $1,000 to assist graduate students to present their research at regional and national meetings with small grants to offset costs of travel. His third request would be funds to help furnish the newly-renovated counseling laboratory. His fourth request would be audio recorders and calculators for faculty offices. And his fifth request would be for two electric typewriters for student use.

Curriculum & Teaching

"As great as our needs are for additional personnel and equipment," responded Dr. Andrew Weaver, head of the Department of Curriculum and Teaching, "I would prefer assistance in boosting faculty morale and in recruiting outstanding students." Therefore his first priority is for "faculty awards for outstanding professors in teaching, research, and extension." President's Club Members could provide those awards annually. The second priority is for scholarships for undergraduate students, which could be given by 10 President's Club donors. The third priority, a gift of $500 would provide funds for awards and recognition ceremonies for outstanding students.

Health, PE & Recreation

Under the tree in the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, Dr. G. Dennis Wilson would like to find equipment to help with both the education of Auburn students and his department's research and public service, particularly areas involving the benefits of exercise and controlling stress. First, he'd look for gifts to buy video cassettes ($100 each) promoting healthy habits or explaining health risks. Then he'd look for a video monitor ($300) to show them on. Next he'd look for assistance in teaching stress management through the use of a heart rate monitors ($90 each), and finally, in the largest package under the tree he'd hope to find a video-camera recorder ($1,500) to use in making videos of his own for teaching and feedback purposes.

Rehab & Special Education

Santa could do a good turn to a number of handicapped children and adults and Auburn at the same time by providing diagnostic tests for Auburn students to use in learning how to evaluate and prescribe vocational and educational training for the handicapped. Each $100 gift would provide one copy of one of the more than 20 different tests needed. A $1,000 gift would provide a copy of half of the tests needed. The Department of Rehabilitation and Special Education needs five copies of each of the more than twenty tests.

"One of the most important responsibilities that our rehabilitation and special education program graduates will have as practitioners," explains Dr. Martin Diebold, "will be to evaluate the capabilities of handicapped children and adults. The success of vocational and educational programs for these handicapped people will rely on the diagnostic competence of the undergraduate and graduate students we prepare. Because of budgetary limitations, we have been unable to purchase more than one copy of the several types of diagnostic tests that our students must be able to competently administer. The diagnostics classes we teach frequently enroll 15 to 20 students. While we have tried to be creative in attempting to "share" single copies of these tests, true demonstration of competence really requires that each person or pair of students have a test to use during our lab classes. The situation is not unlike having one microscope for all students enrolled in a microbiology class....We estimate that each of our graduates will, in their professional careers, provide diagnostic services to several hundred handicapped people. Therefore, any help the alumni can give us will go a long way to helping several thousand handicapped people throughout the nation who will be evaluated by our graduates."

Adult & Vocational Ed

If Santa brings gifts to Annual Giving designated to the Department of Vocational and Adult Education, Dr. R.A. Baker will use the money for public relations and recruiting. At the top of the list would be funds to send students and professors across Alabama to talk to students in junior colleges about the advantages of a career in working in adult and vocational education and the programs that Auburn offers in that area. Each $1,000 gift should fund several excursions.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Dr. Charles Griffin, head of student services in the College of Engineering, requests three study carrels ($600 each) to be used in the Howard Strong Engineering Tutorial Program. Each carrel would accommodate both the student and tutor and provide "visual and acoustical shielding."

Aerospace Engineering

In the Department of Aerospace Engineering, Dr. James C. Williams, III, would like to see alumni of his department provide faculty travel to national meetings, which would cost $1,000. Maintenance on laboratory and office equipment could be the gift of three President's Club donors. Others could join together to provide additional secretarial assistance with $4,500. A gift of $750 or $1,000 would provide an annual teaching award for the department.

Chemical Engineering

The top priority for gifts to his department would be contributions to buy undergraduate lab equipment ($1,000) according to Dr. Robert Chambers of Chemical Engineering. Second on his list would be funds for faculty travel to conferences ($700), and third would be funds to provide teaching faculty.

Civil Engineering

Christmas gifts to the Department of Civil Engineering would go to equipment or scholarship awards according to Department Head Ed Ramey. As in many other departments, the list leads off with computer equipment. In CE, the request is for several President's Club donors to provide the funds for a Xerox 6455 Memorywriter, an IBM PC/AT microcomputer system, and IBM PC/XT. Individuals might want to fund surveying computer software ($1,000), a centrifuge ($900), a laboratory vibrator ($400), sieves ($700), a sieve shaker ($450). Joint gifts could also other equipment needs ranging from a $1,800 precision scaler to a $15,000 universal testing machine.

Computer Engineering

Dr. Charles Vick of the Department of Computer Science and Engineering says that any gifts that come to his department will be used for visiting lecturers ($1,000) and to send faculty to conferences ($700 per trip).

Electrical Engineering

Dr. J. David Irwin '61 would use each $1,000 gift (or two or three gifts that totaled that much) to upgrade an existing personal computer by "adding a hard disk and more memory." And, should his department receive sufficient funds he would combine "several gifts to purchase a laser printer for high quality production of papers, research reports, teaching materials, etc."

Industrial Engineering

Dr. V. E. Unger of the Department of Industrial Engineering would use Christmas gifts to: 1) continue to publish the departmental newsletter, which costs $1,500 per year; 2) purchase laboratory equipment (need $40,000 for the ergonomics laboratory equipment); 3) send faculty and students to conferences ($1,000 per conference); and 4) provide graduate fellowships ($5,000 per year).

Dean June Henton would use $1,000 earmarked for the Dean's Office for "public relations activities (such as our school newsletter) to better inform alumni and friends about our changing programs."

Consumer Affairs

A Santa who wanted to make the Department of Consumer Affairs have a Merry Christmas could provide funds for one or several of the following items: A tabletop display board with carry case ($1,200) or a fullsize display board with rear projection unit and carrying case ($3,500). Acting Department Head Doty Cavendar would use the display boards in public relations for the department at conventions or in recruiting students and faculty. Second on the list are five stereo microscopes at $500 each for use in textile courses and in textile research programs. Next comes IBM personal computers for faculty ($1,500 each), followed by video tapes ($300 each) for teaching as well as a video camera ($1,500) to use in teaching, several carousel slide projectors ($300 each), and five overhead projectors with carts at $500 each.

Family & Child Development

Asked for her Christmas wish for the Department of Family and Child Development, Dr. Marilyn Bradbard sent a one and one-half page list ranging from $10 for a video tape to $900,000 for a child study center building. In the range of the $1,000 or less, she included: a 35mm camera for the Child Study Center ($300), teaching films and videos ($500 each), 10 statistical analysis packages for microcomputers ($100 each per year), 2 audio visual carts ($400 each), 2 standard cassette transcribers ($275 each), 20 blank video cassettes ($10 each), 10 tricycles for the Child Study Center ($100 each), and oak blocks for the Child Study Center ($500). Donors to the President's Club could fund typewriters ($1,000 each) or join together to provide microcomputers and accessories for the use of faculty and students ($3,000), or provide video equipment for the research lab at the Child Study Center (a VCR, monitor, camera, and tripod at $2,500).

Nutrition & Foods

Heading the Christmas wish list of Dr. Helen Lane of the Department of Nutrition and Foods is computer software for the students to use in various foods courses in order to calculate menus, nutritional quality, cost, etc. Such programs include Super Calc 4, of which she needs three copies at $100 each, would permit students to calculate the cost of different meals including grocery prices as well as labor and overhead. Another program, Nutritionist III, $495, provides a diet and exercise program to help professionals prescribe diet and exercise programs for patients. This software will allow the students to develop special diets (diabetics, hypertension) including patient's food preferences, explains Dr. Lane.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

Dr. Caine Campbell, acting dean of the College of Liberal Arts, starts his wish list with a film series on "World War Two or a film series of the giver's choice. There are many we need. A gift could be for one film in a series $350, up to $3,000 or more for the series." Several donors could go in together to provide a 15-passenger van which the College would use for a variety of purposes, especially Dean Campbell says, "for archeology field trips and for the Center for the Arts and Humanities to use when lecturers and artists and musicians go out to towns and cities to put on programs."

Archeology

Dr. John Cottier '64 of the Archeology Department would use any gifts that came to his department to "support this fantastic archeological project we have going down in Elmore County. It is one of the most significant Indian village sites left in the Southeast." Gifts of any amount would help the department. "We need money to pay students to do the excavating; we need money to pay for carbon dating which costs $150 to $200 for each date; we need a new metal detector ($700). We need everything—even paper bags, which we buy in lots depending on size, ranging from 500 to 1,000 and costing $7 to $25 per bundle."

Art

To explain the Art Department's wish, Dr. James M. Collier, acting head, wrote: "The Art Department was recently awarded enough money to buy an IBM Personal Computer. This will be used for keeping student records and for word processing. However, in this year of severe budget cuts, we are unable to afford the programming of the computer for its effective use. It costs about $2,000. That's what we would like for Christmas!"

Center for Arts and Humanities

If Santa were bringing a $1,000 gift directly to the Center for the Arts and Humanities, Director Leah Rawls Atkins '58 would ask for a typewriter with memory "to replace the old one which has lasted one year longer than we expected."

Communication Disorders

Dr. William Weidner of the Department of Communication Disorders would request equipment to better serve the students and the clients with whom his department works. At the top of the list is an Apple II E Imagewriter printer ($1,500). Second on the list is software to use in working with stroke victims ($500). Third is an assistive listening device which is used in working with hard-of-hearing patients ($1,000). And finally, he'd use any other gifts to buy a portable video camera to use in working with children with language disorders ($1,500).

English

The first priority on Dr. Bert Hitchcock's Christmas wish list is for several gifts to put together to provide financial assistance to graduate students "in the form of scholarships, fellowships, or teaching awards." His second priority would be for gifts to buy wordprocessing equipment for use by faculty members and graduate assistants. The department currently has four word processors for 64 faculty and 28 GTAs. Third on his list would be funds to buy a copy machine ($5,000) for use by faculty in preparing class handouts. "We have one terribly overworked machine now and are in constant fear of or in turmoil with, a breakdown." As with most departments on campus, another priority would be for funds to send faculty to conferences, which Dr. Hitchcock explains provide "important benefits for teaching as well as research." The final item on his wish list would be $100 gifts for reference books for the writing labs.

Foreign Languages

"The Foreign Language Department's A.B. Dick model 525 mimeograph machine is on its last legs," according to Department Head Henry Helmke. "Our 'wish' would be to have funding for another mimeograph machine. The Heyer model 1777 variable speed mimeograph machine has good ratings and would cost about $900. We also have an IBM computer on loan from that company which has been offered to us for about $2,300, but we do not have the funds to buy it and will probably have to let it go back to IBM, unless an alumnus or two can fund it for us."

Geology

Dr. Robert Cook of the Geology Department has storage cabinets at the top of his Christmas list. "We need at least 12 storage cabinets ($500 each) with drawers for teaching sample storage. Second on the Christmas list are funds for sending faculty and students to attend professional meetings ($600 per trip).

History

The History Department is operating this year on 63 percent of its 1985-86 budget so Department Head Gordon Bond would welcome any gifts. "We are reducing our normal departmental activities (fewer phone calls, less xeroxing, few exams—less paper used, etc.) to stay within our operating budget. Any gifts would help us do our job better and will be deeply appreciated." His first priority is for travel funds, "any amount" for the faculty to present papers at professional conferences, etc. The second priority is for maps and slides: "We are going to teach the History of Contemporary China winter quarter," he explains, "and we have no map of modern China." Gifts ranging from $200 to $500 would buy maps and slides. A $1,000 gift would help provide a personal computer with mainframe possibilities for department use.

Journalism

Journalism graduates who want to play Santa to their department will find two Besler enlargers ($410) for the photo darkroom at the top of Department Head Jack Simms' list. Second on the list are donations to the Mary Whitley Memorial Scholarship Fund which provides a journalism scholarship and memorializes a former Plainsman editor.

Music

Dr. Harold Kafer of the Music Department dreams about a new concert grand piano ($30,000), a computer music writing system ($7,000), an F tuba ($3,125), a C tuba ($2,200) a baritone sax ($2,250), an euphonium ($1,650), a bass clarinet ($1,695), a contra bassoon ($5,950), and a descant horn ($1,325). In the $1,000 gift range he suggests cases for the F and C tubas ($300 each), a flugel horn ($595), a C trumpet ($695), an E flat trumpet ($995), and a piccolo trumpet ($995).

Philosophy

would be for contributions to the Pancheri Scholarship Fund. The department needs $9,000 to bring the fund up to $15,000 which could be depended on to pay the tuition costs for an outstanding philosophy major who plans to enter medicine.

"The Fund was begun several years ago by the Pancheri family in memory of Professor Lillian Pancheri, a very popular teacher, who inaugurated our course Ethics and the Health Sciences," explains Dr. McKown. "There are, doubtless, many young physicians now practicing who remember Professor Pancheri with especial fondness and who would contribute if they only knew about the Fund begun in her memory, but not fully funded by her family. Any amount could be contributed, and if oversubscribed, more than one eligible student would be assisted."

Political Science

Although members of the faculty in the Department of Political Science have invitations and commitments to present papers, etc., totalling $12,000 for the 1986-87 year, according to Department Head Gerald Johnson, the budget for such travel is $0.00 because of proration. Thus the first priority for any Christmas gifts to that department would be for faculty travel. Second on the wish list are personal computers for faculty at $1,000 each. Several contributions to the President's Club could be used to fund his third priority, graduate scholarships at $6,000 each. The fourth priority would be gifts to a $5,000 student development fund which would send students to conferences to represent Auburn.

Psychology

Dr. Peter Harzem of Psychology would love to find a number of items under the departmental Christmas tree from gifts to Annual Giving. First on the list are several IBM (or equivalent) personal commuters with printers ($1,600 each) for faculty and graduate student use; and several gifts of $700 to provide travel support for faculty to present papers at meetings and conventions.

Religion

Dr. Richard J. Penaskovic, head of the Department of Religion, requests film strips for use in a course on the History of Christianity and travel funds for faculty. A gift of $200 would buy the 16mm film strips, and he explains, $400 would send a faculty member to a conference at Notre Dame University next June. Another $150 would send a faculty member to Atlanta to give a paper at the Southeastern Regional Meeting of the American Academy of Religion in March.

Speech Communication

"We found out only last week that we are going to lose our computer terminal in this department. The computer center will no longer be supporting the controller which links us to the mainframe computer. In order to continue to operate at the same level we have in the past, we will be required to obtain either a new terminal or a IBM PC which can serve as a terminal," wrote Don Richardson, head of the Department of Speech Communication. "Therefore, we would like to request, dear Santa, an IBM PC 5150 System Model 176, 256 K, with two diskette drives.

their terms extended for one year to end in 1987 are Bill Jordan '59 of Fort Payne; Lee Griffith '62 of Westchester, Pa.; Mike Moseley '61 of Montgomery; and Wycliff Orr '68 of Gainesville, Ga. Don Machen '61 of Auburn was recognized for his service to the board.

Also at the annual meeting, six clubs received charters. Accepting the charters were: Debbie Metzger for the Big Sun Auburn Club in Ocala, Fla.; Pat Barkuloo '56 of the Tift Area Auburn Club in Tifton, Ga.; Bill Bowles '82 of the Southwest Georgia Auburn Club in Albany, Ga.; Joe Pearson '71 of the Hale County Auburn Club; Rick Williams of the Monroe County Auburn Club; and Pam Sheffield '65 of the Dale County Auburn Club.

You Can Be Santa

We will also need an emulation adaptor as well as emulation software. If you could somehow arrange to bring us this equipment as a Christmas gift, we would be eternally grateful." The IBM PC which Dr. Richardson requests would cost the University $1,000. The 5050 emulation adapter would be $416.50 and the 8975 emulation software $129.50.

Sociology/Anthropology/Social Work

Dr. Murray Adams of the Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Social Work lists the top items on his department's list to Santa as: "1) Travel to professional meetings, since proration has completely wiped out our travel budget ($1,000). 2) Donations to the Hartwig Scholarship Endowment Fund to increase an endowment which will reward students for high academic performance and faculty for teaching excellence. 3) A computer terminal which would connect to the mainframe and facilitate a faculty member's teaching and research ($950)."

Theatre

Any gifts which Santa brings the Department of Theatre will be used for a computerized lighting system. The theatre, says, department head Lois Garren is in "desperate need" of such a system. "The original system installed in the Telfair Peet Theatre in 1972 was left unfinished and is now obsolete. The current system continually breaks down; repair parts are increasingly more difficult to find." That situation, continued Prof. Garren, "not only adversely affects the quality education of theatre majors, but it also presents the very real problem of having to shut down our production season." The cost of a new system is $80,000. "Every gift, no matter what the amount, will help us reach that goal and will be greatly appreciated."

SCHOOL OF PHARMACY

Dean Ben Cooper leads off the School of Pharmacy's Christmas wish list with a request for funds to employ students in laboratories and offices—a gift of $500 would permit the department to employ one student for one quarter for 15 hours a week. Three such gifts would allow the School to employ him or her all year. A gift of $500 would also provide software for teaching and administration. Each gift of $100 would buy books and journals for the pharmacy learning resource center for students and faculty. Dean Cooper's third request is for $1,000 to provide honoraria and travel expenses to bring in guest lecturers and consultants.

PLACEMENT OFFICE

The University Placement Service, which provides contacts for jobs for Auburn students and alumni, would be delighted if a few alumni would play Santa for their needs. Director Larry Long notes that they are "in desperate need of a computer (PC compatible) with printer" which would cost $3,000 and at the same time give some President's Club members an opportunity to help Auburn and help Auburn provide contacts for their companies' employment. The Placement Service also needs funds to join the Southern College Placement Association (SCPA) (which is no longer in the university budget) and to attend seminars to get ideas and stay abreast in the field. Two gifts of $1,000 would provide SCPA membership and send staff to seminars. Abbe Hockaday of the Alumni Placement Service staff would feel that Santa had remembered her if he delivered funds ($300) to pay for a visit to a couple of other alumni placement services to see how they do things and gain ideas for improving Auburn's services to alumni in that area.

COLLEGE OF SCIENCE & MATHEMATICS

Acting Dean Robert Kribel of the new College of Sciences and Mathematics says his College "has many needs which could be addressed by alumni gifts." At the top of his stocking he'd like to find cash awards for the Outstanding Teacher and the Outstanding Researcher in his school ($500 each). Next in his stocking would be an honorarium to bring a nationally prominent lecturer in the sciences ($1,000). Third he'd reach for funds to buy plants for the Arboretum ($200). Fourth comes computer terminals ($1,000) and finally, way down in the toe, he'd like to find some funds to develop a publication to use to recruit students and faculty.

Algebra, Combinatorics & Analysis

Heading the list of Christmas wishes is an award for good teaching. A gift of $1,000 would be a start toward a permanent award. Second on Dr. James Wall's wish list is funding to bring a distinguished mathematician to campus for a lecture or colloquium series each year which would cost approximately $1,500 to $2,500. Third on his list is an award for the outstanding math student in each of the classes from freshman through senior level. Another $1,000 gift would provide a computer terminal or PC for a faculty member (they need five) and, his final wish is for funds to send faculty to conferences. "Any amount helps; the average trip to a research meeting runs about $700," according to Dr. Wall.

Department of Chemistry

Alumni who play Santa Claus to the Department of Chemistry will be supporting student learning experiences. Heading the list of Christmas wishes for the Department of Chemistry are summer fellowships for junior or senior high school students at $1,500 each. The second priority would be for travel for a student to present his or her research results at a national meeting of the American Chemical Society or the American Association of Biological Chemists ($1,000 each). The third priority is a grant for an upperclass undergraduate student to carry out a research project during the summer under the direction of a faculty member ($1,000 each). The fourth priority would be for scholarship awards for top undergraduate or graduate students at Auburn of $500 each.

Zoology-Entomology

Dr. John Pritchett '65 would use any gift money coming through Annual Giving Christmas gifts to his department for

"special experiences for undergraduate and graduate students which we could not fund from appropriated funds."

On his list are research supplies and travel expenses for students to help students "carry out their degree related classroom and research activities." Other gifts would be used to send students to professional meetings to present research results. A $400 gift would provide awards recognizing graduate students' superior teaching and research accomplishments. Other gifts totalling $3,000 would send Auburn's departmental teams to compete on the regional and national basis.

Physics

Any cash gifts that Santa brings to the Department of Physics according to Prof. Earl Kinzer, acting head, would be used to send faculty to conferences ($800 each) and to buy personal computers for faculty use ($1,000 each).

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

Among the ways Dean Tom Vaughan '55 of Veterinary Medicine can see to use money which could be given to his school would be for temporary help in busy times typing proposals, or doing maintenance for clinic projects. Funds given for equipment would go to individual departments. Dean Vaughan explains that gifts to the Vet College could be "used for anything from travel to new construction. The majority of amounts up to $1,000 would go for new equipment in support of instruction and research. The want list would extend for pages."

Pathology & Parasitology

Dr. L. G. Wolfe, head of the Department of Pathology and Parasitology, includes on his Christmas list a 35mm slide projector ($400) to use in instruction; laboratory furniture ($500) for multiviewing microscopy laboratory for use by students in clinic rotations. Three veterinary alumni could become President's Club members and join together to revamp the the glass slide study sets for laboratory instruction in pathology and parasitology. Others could jointly fund microcomputers and a printer, for use by secretarial staff and faculty relevant to diagnostic services, instruction, research, and administration ($8,000). A really generous Santa could provide $25,000 for a photomicroscope to use in instruction and research.

Large Animal Surgery & Medicine

Dr. D. F. Walker says that any gifts made to the Department of Large Animal Service and Medicine would be included in an account already established to support departmental research and scholarly development. "In this context the money would make possible the conduction of pilot research, purchase of new equipment and provide funds for departmental travel. These areas have been drastically cut in the current year's budget."

Small Animal Surgery & Medicine

Dr. C.D. Knecht of the Department of Small Animal Surgery and Medicine notes that the prioritized equipment needs for his department add up to more than $200,000. The top few include a Nikon ophthalmic camera ($960), 2 surgitron electrosurgical units ($1,350 each), and a anesthetic gas analyzer ($1,690).

In addition to those equipment needs, Dr. Knecht notes that should Auburn friends "wish to help our animal friends in a different way, the Small Animal Clinic is trying to build a Good Samaritan Fund." The interest from the fund provides emergency care for animals whose owners are unknown. "Many caring people stop and render first aid to small animals even though the owner is not known," explains Dr. Knecht. "These animals, which may be pets or strays, dogs or birds, are frequently seen by the emergency clinicians of the Small Animal Clinic. Working in consort with the animal shelter, we provide emergency care and relief from pain. There is too little money to do more. The Santa in this case would be giving to Auburn and to animals in need."

Microbiology

Dr. Paul C. Smith of the Department of Microbiology lists his first priority for gifts to Auburn Annual Giving as support for a graduate teaching assistant. He suggests that gifts of $1,000 could be combined for that support. In addition, a small scholarship fund in memory of Dr. Paul R. Schnurrenberger provides limited support for a graduate student. Donations of any amount to that fund would help increase the support for a graduate student studying epidemiology and public health.

The second priority on Dr. Smith's list is a multiviewing teaching microscope in which six students could view the same microscopic images as the instructor. Again, several gifts would need to be put together to come up with the $10,000 price.

Big First Half All AU Needs to Rip Vandy, 31-9

It was over before the fans had all been seated. The Tigers exploded for enough points to win the game in the first two minutes. After Tommie Agee ran the opening kickoff back to the Vanderbilt 43 and a quick pass from Jeff Burger to Trey Gainous on first down netted five yards, Brent Fullwood took a pitchout on a toss sweep, turned the corner and raced 38 yards for a touchdown. Fifteen seconds later linebacker Kurt Crain pounced on a loose Vandy pitch in the end zone to make the score 14-0 with barely a minute shaved off the clock.

Vanderbilt gamely came back with a field goal to make it 14-3, but Auburn's Chris Knapp matched the three-pointer with one of his own, a 37-yarder, on Auburn's next possession. When the Commodores missed a field goal on their next drive, the Auburn offense took over. Auburn used five plays, including a 61-yard reception by wideout Duke Donaldson, to set up Collis Campbell's first touchdown since 1984, a seven-yard burst to make it 24-3. After a Vanderbilt punt, Auburn went 64 yards in six plays, scoring on a 21-yard reverse by Scott Bolton to make the score 31-3 at the half.

It seemed Auburn would score 50 points as it had against West Carolina, but the Commodores fought the Auburn offense to a standstill (with the aid of two Auburn turnovers) for a 6-0 second-half moral victory. A 55-yard run by Fullwood put Auburn on the Vandy 8, but on third down Burger was intercepted in the end zone. An interception return of 47 yards by linebacker Alvin Mitchell left the ball at the Commodore 7, but Collis Campbell coughed up the ball on third down.

If anything, the day belonged to a defense, which scored Auburn's second touchdown and kept a well-balanced Vanderbilt out of the end zone as it bent, but never broke. Three times Vanderbilt drove inside the Auburn 20-yard line, and three times had to settle for field goals.

Brent Fullwood led the way for the offense that rolled up 371 yards, contributing 145 yards on just seven carries. And Jeff Burger had another good day with Auburn's new balanced offense, completing 7-of-10 passes for 106 yards. Kurt Crain anchored the defense with 14 tackles and his touchdown, and Tracy Rocker and Aundray Bruce chipped in 12 and nine tackles respectively. Defensive backs Alvin Briggs and Chip Powell and linebacker Alvin Mitchell each pulled down interceptions.

Dye's Fears Unfounded AU Wrecks Tech, 31-10

Once again Coach Pat Dye lamented his untested team facing a Georgia Tech team coming off a 59-21 mauling of 17th-ranked North Carolina State. And, once again, his Tigers went out and proved him wrong, although falling behind for the first time this season as the Yellow Jackets drove for a field goal on their first possession to go up 3-0. Auburn answered with an acrobatic 34-yard touchdown reception to go ahead, and the Tigers never looked back.

After a stingy Tiger defense cost the Jackets two yards on their next possession, and a poor punt gave Auburn the ball at its own 47, the Tigers moved to the Tech three-yard line in seven plays, with Reggie Ware going over for the score to make it 14-3 late in the first quarter. Another punt gave Auburn the ball back, and Chris Knapp capped a 10-play, 61-yard drive that consumed almost half the second quarter to end with a 35-yard field goal. On Auburn's next possession, Burger tossed a seven-yard pass to tight end Walter Reeves to make the score 24-3 with 53 seconds left in the half.

The Yellow Jackets gave the estimated 72,500 fans their only scare of the afternoon on their first possession of the second half as they drove to a touchdown to close within 14 points at 24-10. But, in answer to the threat, Auburn roared back with a five-play, 75-yard drive ending with a 13-yard jaunt by Fullwood to end all scoring for the afternoon.

During the game, Auburn rolled up 405 yards in total offense, much of it coming on Burger's 175 yards passing and Fullwood's 183 yards on the ground.

Auburn continued to rule the line of scrimmage against the Jackets, allowing only 77 yards rushing to a team that had totaled 370 the week before. However, the Tigers gave up 273 yards passing, most of it trash yardage in the second half as they pulled back into a prevent defense against long gainers. Kurt Crain again led the defense with 19 tackles plus an interception to stop a scoring threat in the fourth quarter. Chip Powell picked off a pass and was in on nine tackles, and defensive lineman Nate Hill played a good game, recording 11 tackles.

But all defensive bright spots faded with the career-ending injury to All-SEC and probable All-American safety Tom Powell. One of Auburn's defensive leaders and the anchor for the defensive backfield, Powell was injured on a freak play in the third quarter as he and fellow defensive back Kevin Porter collided while diving for a Tech pass. The following week the defense would pull together with the loss of Powell, but his absence from the lineup on the first Saturday in November would prove fatal.

Auburn Onslaught Continues, State Rolls Over, 35-6

Start with the pre-game hype for two SEC unbeaten. Add a national TV audience and a hostile homecoming crowd. Mix in Mississippi State's quarterback, Don Smith, the SEC's total offense leader, and Coach Pat Dye all but cried for mercy as his Auburn Tigers headed into unfamiliar Starkville. So how did the Tigers respond? By silencing the infamous State cowbells, cruising to a 35-0 lead in the fourth quarter, and putting the Bulldogs back into their second-division status.

After punting on their first possession, then stifling State's Smith, the Tigers ripped through an eight-play, 51-yard drive with the help of a 26-yard screen pass catch and run by fullback Tommie Agee, setting up Brent Fullwood's one-yard plunge to put the Tigers ahead to stay. Then, with a Mississippi State punt pinning Auburn back at its own 12-yard line, Brent Fullwood took a pitchout, broke through a crowd at the line of scrimmage, and raced 88 yards untouched into the end zone for the second-longest run from scrimmage in Auburn history. 14-0 Auburn.

But the offense wasn't finished. After another State punt, Auburn drove 80 yards in 10 plays, using a 33-yard pass from Burger to Tillman and a 14-yard scamper on a reverse by Scott Bolton to set up Fullwood's second touchdown of the night. And what a touchdown it was. From the 10, Fullwood broke several tackles then ran over around and through five defenders at the three-yard line to make Auburn fans forget Bo Jackson as he dove into the end zone.

ON THE LOOSE—Brent Fullwood turns the corner against Georgia Tech on the way to 183 yards rushing in the game. One of the oldest rivalries in the South, Auburn's 31-10 victory over Georgia Tech marked Tech's last visit to Jordan Hare Stadium until the 1990s.

Late in the half, with State driving in an attempt to stem the flood of Auburn points on the board, Chip Powell picked off a poorly thrown Don Smith pass, returning it 35 yards to the State 36. From there, Auburn used two plays to set up the score by Reggie Ware, the Tigers' short yardage and designated scoring back, a one-yard plunge just seconds before the half.

Halftime. With a 28-0 Auburn lead, the cowbells melted into plowshares, as most of the crowd also melted into the relatively safe nightlife of Starkville's homecoming parties. Auburn had run up 281 total yards to State's 107, and Don Smith, the most dangerous player in the SEC according to Pat Dye, had been held to minus four yards rushing and only 81 passing. The Bulldogs had only crossed into Auburn territory once.

In the second half, Auburn called off the dogs but not the defense as Auburn forced two fumbles and an interception to keep State at bay after adding the final nail in the coffin on an 82-yard, seven play drive to open the half. Utilizing runs of 23 and 29 yards by Tommie Agee to put Auburn at the State 22. From there, Fullwood carried the ball three straight times, the last carry resulting in a five-yard touchdown.

Again, Fullwood and Burger headed an offense that rolled to 487 yards total. Burger finished at 6-of-12 for 125 yards through the air, and Fullwood, fighting the flu, rushed for three touchdowns and 183 yards on 16 carries, keeping his All-University yards-per-carry average hovering around 10.

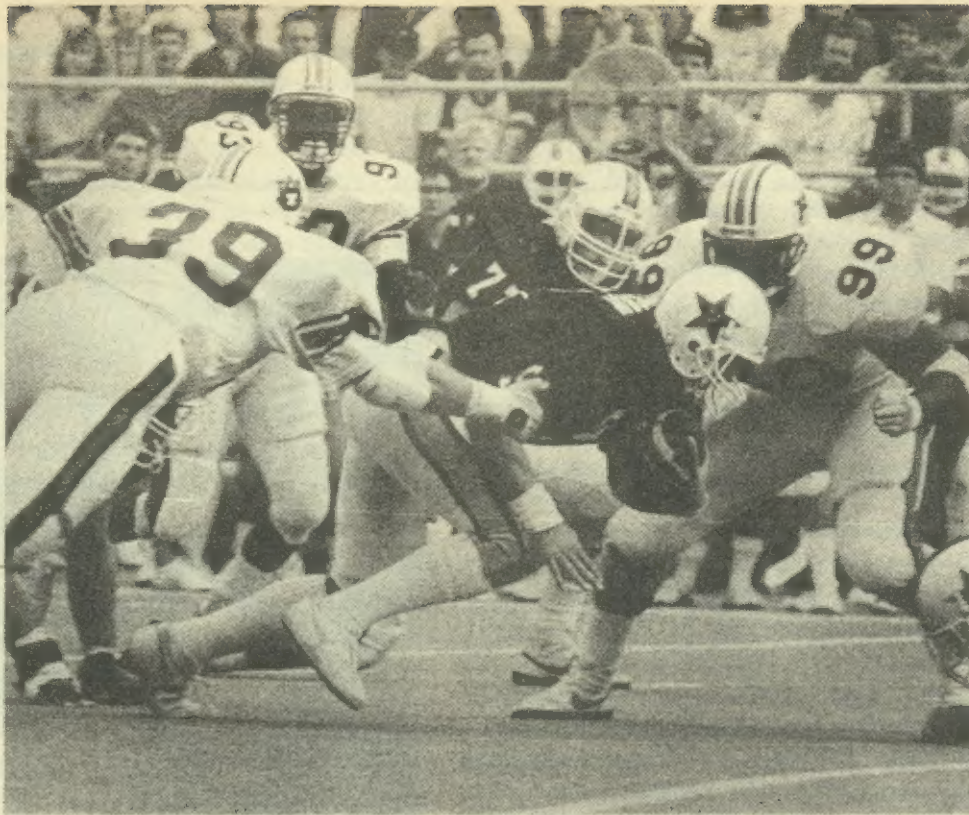

The big story for the defense was the containment of Smith, who finished the night with 135 total yards, half of his average, and the 59 minutes of shutout football spoiled only by a touchdown pass in the final seconds of the game. Kurt Crain led with 14 tackles, and Aundray Bruce contributed nine.

Lights Go Out, Gators Burn AU, 18-17

Unbelievable. For the 74,000 fans in Gainesville and the 5,000 Auburn diehards watching on closed circuit in Memorial Coliseum, unbelievable. Auburn watched its proud defense get burned for 18 unanswered points in the fourth quarter as it dropped from the national and SEC ranks of the unbeaten, losing again in Gainesville—seven straight times since a victory in 1972.

The game started scary enough, with a Burger pass intercepted on Auburn's second play from scrimmage to give Florida the ball on Auburn's 17. But the favor was returned three plays later when Chip Powell picked off an errant Rodney Brewer pass, returning it to the 12. From there, Auburn rumbled 88 yards, using up half the quarter, before Reggie Ware dove over from the one. Auburn scored again after a fumble recovery by defensive tackle Robert Goff gave Auburn the ball at the Gator 11. Three plays later Fullwood scored on a draw play from 10 yards out.

At the half, the score stood at 14-0, Auburn taking advantage of two Florida

SWARMING DEFENSE—Auburn's Kurt Crain (39), Nate Hill (99), and Aundray Bruce (93) surround Vanderbilt's quarterback, taking him to the ground. The defense did its job against Vanderbilt that afternoon, holding the Commodores out of the end zone as they had to settle for three field goals in Auburn's 31-9 win.

turnovers. But, by not taking advantage of four other Florida turnovers, with Collis Campbell fumbling inside the Florida 10, and Chris Knapp misfiring on a 43-yard field goal, the Tigers had unwittingly sealed the fate of the game.

In the third quarter, Auburn halted two impressive Florida drives, with the deepest, to the Auburn 32, stopped by Florida's seventh turnover of the day, an interception by Alvin Briggs. Auburn then milked the clock, driving 64 yards in eight plays before Knapp hit his field goal to make the score 17-0 at the end of the third.

However, scratching and clawing, the Gators came fighting back to make the score 17-10 on a quarterback sneak and a field goal. Auburn, using the clock wisely, drove the ball to the Gator 36 with less than two minutes to go. But a Reggie Ware fumble set the nightmare in motion. Aundray Bruce drops a sure interception, the Tigers get called for two big penalties, and all of a sudden it's Ricky Nattiel gathering in a fade pass in the end zone, pulling the Gators within one point. On the two-point play that was never in question, Auburn had Florida quarterback Kerwin Bell's receivers covered up. But a breakdown in the pass rush allowed a scramble for the final points to put it away. In the end, after a Brent Fullwood kickoff return to the Auburn 49 and two pass completions to the Florida 36, Knapp missed a 52-yard field goal as time ran out.

Fullwood's 168 yards was the only bright spot for an offense that didn't put the game away when it had the chance. The defense was led by 11 hungry football players who tore into the Gators for 58 minutes, coming up one point short. The only resemblance of greatness was Auburn's defense for three quarters and the ill-fated offensive drive before Ware's fumble in the fourth. The loss made New Orleans seem farther away than Louisiana, and Gainesville a 1986 Waterloo.

AU Pleases Grads, Wallops UC, 52-7

The last of the so-called 'no names'

on Auburn's schedule, the Cincinnati Bearcats, came into Auburn's 60th homecoming game having played both Penn State and Miami, the nation's top two teams. Again, Coach Pat Dye stressed that Auburn would have to play a full 60 minutes to win the game. And again, it was over in the first quarter.

Auburn's first possession, after a Cincinnati punt, ended with a four-yard sweep and dive into the corner of the end zone by Tommie Agee. A Cincinnati fumble, the first of six turnovers on the day, gave Auburn the ball at the Bearcats' 39. Two plays later, Brent Fullwood took a pitch from Jeff Burger on an apparent toss sweep, then pulled up at the corner and threw a fluttering 31-yard touchdown pass to Lawyer Tillman in the end zone to make the score 14-0. After a heavy rush on the punt forced the Bearcats to give up the ball at their own 21, quarterback Jeff Burger hit wideout Scott Bolton at the seven. On the next play freshman James Joseph burst over the right side for the third Tiger touchdown midway through the second quarter. Right before the half, cornerback Alvin Briggs picked off a Cincinnati pass in the end zone to set up Auburn's fourth drive of the day, an 80-yarder topped off by a 17-yard reverse scoring Scott Bolton behind a wall of Tiger blockers to put Auburn up 28-0 at the half.

The second half, usually noted this season for Auburn's offensive naps, was the best of the year for Auburn. On their first possession in the third quarter, the Tigers moved 75 yards with the aid of five Burger completions before tailback Tim Jessie bulled over from seven yards out. Cincinnati retaliated, moving to its only touchdown of the day on the arm of quarterback Danny McCain and runner Reggie Taylor, who swept the right side from two yards out to put the Bearcats on the board.

Taylor, a tiny 5-foot-7, 170-pounder, rushed for 153 yards against the Tigers, more than any other back this season. In fact, going into the game Auburn's defense was allowing only an average of 71 yards per game on the ground.

Thus challenged, the Tigers answered with Chris Knapp's 44-yard field goal after a 53-yard, ten-play drive directed by second-string freshman quarterback Reggie Slack to make the score 38-7. Big man Aundray Bruce pounced on a fumble after McCain went down on the Cincinnati series to give Auburn the lead at the Bearcat 22. After Fullwood carried three times for 17 yards, Reggie Ware bulled over for his tenth touchdown of the season with ten minutes left in game. Cornerback Kevin Porter dropped a Cincinnati a final blow with his interception of the season when he stepped in front of a McCain pass on the next possession, returning the interception 42 yards to make the final tally 7.

For the defense, Chip Powell and Alvin Briggs' interceptions left them tied for SEC lead with five apiece. Also, both Powell and Briggs recovered fumbles along with Aundray Bruce, as the Tigers ran their turnover margin plus-21 into the black. Again Kurt Crain led the defense with 12 tackles, and Tracy Rocker added seven.

The offense, dedicated to opening the game up and scoring points in the second half, rolled up 491 yards in total offense paced by the passing of Jeff Burger, 18-for-22, 138 yards, and the running of Brent Fullwood, 11 carries, 120 yards. Tailback Tim Jessie, starting the game because Fullwood missed most of the previous week's practice with minor injuries, contributed 63 yards on 11 carries. After scoring 28 points in the first half, the Tigers gained their objective as they didn't surrender on the lead, adding 24 more points in the second half.
